5

10

15

ABSTRACT OF DISCLOSURE

When a network printer receives print data appended with related data from a client device via a network (S11). the related data is separated from the print data (S12) and stored in a predetermined region of a hard disk (S13). data is stored in the hard disk correspondence with the related data. Then, printing is executed to print out the print data (S15). When a user requests display of the related data (S16:YES), the related data is displayed on a display (S17). The related data includes related image data and management data. user requests printing of the related data (S18:YES), a printer engine prints out the related data (S19). way, the user can select desired print data in a short period of time.